Pursuant to previous notice, a large and respectable portion of the Democracy of Craven County assembled in the Court House, in Newbern, on Monday evening the 14th inst., for the purpose of nominating candidates to represent the County in the Senate and House of Commons of the next General Assembly of North Carolina.

The meeting was called to order by James E. Morris, Esq., upon whose motion Nathaniel H. Street, Esq., was called to the Chair, and On motion of James B. Averitt, Esq , J. H. Muse was appointed Secretary. The Chairman then arose and explained the object of the meeting, extending his remarks to considerable length on the importance of having a strong Democratic representation in the ensuing Legislature, in view of the questions of vital interest which are likely to be brought before that body.

It was moved by Joseph J. Robinson, Esq., and unanimously adopted, that a committee, consisting of one from each Captain's District of the County and three from the town of Newbern, be appointed to draft resolutions for the consideration and action of this meeting; Whereupon the Chair appointed the following gentlemen, from the Districts represented as said committee:

Bay River .- G. W. Daniels, C. V. Swan, Henry Beard's Creek .- Zora Lee. Broad Creek.-Frederick P. Latham.

Big Swift Creek .- John Bryan. Core Creek .- James Beasly. Bachelor's Creek .- H. O. Wood. Newbern .- J. J. Robinson, James B. Averitt, Lacy

The committee, after a short absence, returned and reported the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, We appprove of the time honored custom of the Democratic party, of holding a County Convention for the purpose of nominating suitable candidates to represent this County in the General Assembly of North Carolina; therefore

Resolved, That we, in Convention assembled, do nominate Nathaniel H. Street for the Senate; and H. C. Jones and J. H. Bryan for the House of Com-

Resolved, That President James Buchanan, by his firm, consistent and conservative administration of the public affairs, and more especially his position upon the Kansas question, is entitled to the admiration and approbation of all good and faithful citizens from all parts of the United States. Resolved, That Governor Thomas Bragg, by his able and efficient administration of the State affairs, has won for himself the regard and esteem of his fellow citizens, and that he will carry with him to his home at the expiration of his term of office, the affections and esteem of the people of North Carolina.

Resolved, That Distribution of the Public Lands or their proceeds is anti-Democratic, unconstitutional, impolitic and impracticable, and deserves the reprobation of all good men, and that we view its agitation in North-Carolina as but another effort of Demagogues for place, spoils and power. Resolved, That we approve and endorse the prin ciples laid down by the Democratic Convention held at Charlotte. Resolved, That as antagonistic to the policy of the State on Internal Improvements, we do hereby ignore and oppose the Danville connection. The resolutions being read to the meeting Mr. Averitt commented at some length on the Senate nomination; alluded to the earnest desire of the Democracy of Craven that Mr. Street should consent to serve them. Spoke of the perfect unanimity which prevailed in the committee in regard to his nomination, and to the manifestations of applause and delight which greeted the announcement of his name to the meeting. He accompanied these remarks with an earnest and impressive appeal to the nominee to accept the position assigned him. Mr. Latham, Chairman of the committee, in behalf of his brethren, and of the Democracy of the County, joined his solicitations with those of Mr.

Mr. Street arose, and, in a few remarks, declined the nomination. He said it would be false modesty in him to affect, that the demonstrations of the meeting in his favor were not gratifying to his feelings, but stated that the condition of his health rendered it impossible for him to accept the nomination. He thanked his fellow citizens for the honor intend-'ed to be conferred upon him, and said he would cheerfully serve them if it was in his power.

The committee retired to fill the vacancy, and, in a few minutes returned and reported that George Green, Esq., had been unanimously chosen as the candidate for the Senate.

It was then moved by James E. Morris, and seconded, that the nomination be made unanimous by the meeting. Adopted, amid much applause. On motion of James E. Morris, a committee of three were appointed by the Chair to inform the gentlemen of their nomination, and request their acceptance of the same. The committee, consisting of Messrs. I. Disosway, Edward Bowen and James E. Morris, retired to perform their duty.

Mr. H. C. Jones, being present in the meeting, arose, and in a few appropriate remarks accepted the nomination. The committee here returned with Mr. Green, who took the floor and in a neat and appropriate speech accepted the nomination for the Senate.

Jos. J. Robinson, Esq., presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted: Resolved, That our representatives, Charles Kelly and James Miller, by their faithful and conservative course in the last General Assembly, and close and watchful attention to the interests of their constituents, merit, and are hereby tendered the thanks of

Moved by Mr. Disosway, that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Union, and the Goldsboro' Tribuue and Raieigh Standard be re-

On motion, the thanks of the meeting were tendered to the Chairman and Secretary, when On motion of Mr. Morris, the meeting adjourned.

Democratic Convention in Surry. Pursuant to previous notice the Democrats of Surry met in Convention at Dobson on Saturday the 3d inst., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Sheriffalty and House of Commons; D. M. Cooper was called to the Chair, and L. H.

Dobson requested to act as Secretary. On motion, William Haymore was unanimously declared the nominee for Sheriff, and R. E. Reeves the nominee for the House of Commons.

The following resolutions were then offered, read, and adopted: Resolved, That we approve of the nomination of Judge Ellis for Governor, and pledge him our undi-

Resolved, That we fully endorse James Buchan-Resolved, That we disapprove of the distribution of the public lands or their proceeds, believing it both unconstitutional and impracticable. Resolved. That we are proud to learn that Joseph Dobson, Esq., will consent to become a candidate in this Senatorial District, and that we will use all honorable means to secure his election. In addition to the above, the following preamble and resolution were offered and adopted : Whereas, a few men living in counties south of us have, contrary to both law and custom, erected dams across the Yadkin river, thereby preventing entirely the passage of fish; and whereas, they have thus deprived us of a privilege we have always enjoyed, and to which we of right are entitled :-Be it therefore resolved, That we earnestly and respectfully request of our next Legislature to secure a law requiring said obstructions to be removed. It was then announced that there were delegates from other counties who would act with us in making a nomination for Senator. On motion of Wm. Wolff, Joseph Dobson, Esq., was nominated by acclamation. It was then ordered that the proceedings be published in the Western Sentinel, and the Standard requested to copy.

RE CONSTRUCTION OF PARTIES.

The re-construction of parties seems just now to be agitating the remnants of parties and factions all over the Union. In the North the little end of the Know Nothings are endeavoring to make terms with the predominant party in that section, while the Black Republicans are equally willing to "fall a peg" upon the foreign question. The Fillmorites, through the Buffalo Commercial, have expressed the desire to unite all the elements of anti-slavery upon some common platform. The New York Tribune promptly meets the overture, and proposes an abatement of the late republican devotion to the rights of foreigners. Speaking directly of the American party, the Tribune says:

"There are two points on which we think concessions should be made to the distinctive American sentiment. The first is that of guarding most effectively the purity of the ballot box. It is not right that the mere word of any male biped in human form, or at the utmost his oath, often given under the double stimulus of liquor and excited partizanship, should be allowed to neutralize the vote of a well known citizen. The right to vote is too sacred, too precious, to be rightfully subject to nullification so easily as this. It is nakedly just, it is urgently necessary, that the right of every one claiming to be a legal voter should be scrutinized more deliberately and established more conclusive than it is the transmitted and established more conclusive to the conclusion. sively than it can be in the turmoil of an election.'

While the Boston Atlas and Bee, endorsing the above sentiments of the Tribune as "liberal and catholic," congratulates itself upon the prospects of a party that will "soon grasp the power of this na-

These, then, are to be the elements of union between the Know-Nothings and the Republicansthe hopes of plunder and power will form a platform which is to abolish all "Third Degree Know Nothingism," and destroy all sympathy between the Republicans and the foreign element of our population. This platform may gain the Know Nothing element of the North, but it loses the same element at the South, while it destroys the strongest feature of Republican strength—the foreign vote.

But no sooner are the terms of the compact agreed upon than the friends of Seward step forward and claim for him the use of the new party. Says the Courier:

"The Republican Party cannot fail to nominate a Representative man for their candidate in 1860; and of course Seward is the man. And what is more, if our party should again look chiefly to expediency in selecting their nomince. their selection could not fail to fall upon one who, by general consent, is admitted to be our ablest Statesman, and who is discovered to be as conservative as he is fearless and able. Even the South have confidence in his conservatism, little as they like his indomitable energy in opposing slavery extension.

Here goes, at one fell swoop, all other aspirants. Crittenden, but a few weeks ago the idol of the opposition, is ruthlessly laid aside, his claims not even politely considered, while Banks, Chase, McLean, Fremont, &c., are told to stand back for the "Representative" man. Seward's "expediency" is one of the chief reasons for his nomination-his lifelong anti-slavery opinions render him the real "representative" man of Northern parties- and the newly adopted anti-foreignism of the Tribune, if it hold out a prospect of success, will doubtlessly be made a part of his Representative charactar. His "conservatism" is intended as a joke-especially since his late speech marking out the destinies of free labor. With the unkindness of this treatment to the other prominent leaders of Know Nothingism and Republicanism, we of course have nothing to do, tude of republics. But what will our Southern American papers and men say to this late arrangement of their friends at the North? In the work of "re-construction" our Southern contemporaries do not seem to have been guided by the instincts of party success, as are their late associates at the North. There unity of sentiment is sought to be made the basis of a platform of principles upon which all anti-slavery men can unite. While at the South, division and discord seem likely to exist not only between the Americans and the Democracy, but to some estent between the friends of the different leaders of the Democracy. And the late discussion at Montgomery is certain, if adopted by any portion of the South, to alienate every Northern Democrat, and unite the whole North upon an anti-slavery platform. This Northern amalgam of anti-foreignism and anti-slavery can only be effectually checked by a union of all parties at the South upon a platform upon which all the conservative men of the North can stand.

This can never be done, if the slave trade be persisted in by its advocates and friends. Continued discussion and agitation of that subject can only produce discord and division at the South, and solid unity of all men of every shade of political opinion at the North, upon an anti-slavery platform; thus certainly and hopelessly severing the last link that binds together the North and the South.

The "re-construction" at the North is to be upon anti-slavery principles, while the "re-construction' at the South is to be upon a "Slave Trade" schedule that must certainly detach Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky, perhaps North-Carolina and Tennessee, from the other Southern States. This statement of the question shows the perfect absurdity of any such

"re-construction." But what "re-construction" does the South want? Can any party be formed that will more certainly recognize the rights of the South, than was done by the Democracy at Cincinnati? Certainly not. The attempt was made in 1855, but that "re construction" soon disgusted its most devoted advocates, and the party sunk under a defeat the most signal and fatal ever sustained by any party. Wise was triumphantly elected, and left scarcely a fragment of that "re-constructed" party to tell the tale of its woes. Let us have no "reconstruction" of parties-let us preserve the National Democratic organization, which, with all its errors and faults?and what human institution has not its errors and its faults?-is the last link that binds the Union; for that let us preserve the organization. You can 're-construct" none better-and 'as long as the Union lasts let the South stand by the National Democracy.-Richmond Enquirer.

Bulwer and Disraeli.-It is just thirty years since a double sensation was created in the literary world by the nearly simultaneous appearance of two brilliant works of fiction, which, though published anonymously, were hailed as the first fruits of two new children of genius who were to be the successors of Byron and Scott in furnishing amusement for English readers. The authors of Vivian Grev and Pelham could not remain long unknown, and it was soon noised abroad that those brilliant novels were the productions of two young men scarce out of their teens, one of them representing an old aristocratic family and the other being the son of a literary adventurer, with nothing but his pen to depend upon. It was perfectly safe to predict for these two literary heroes a brilliant career in the airy realm of fiction, and their subsequent performances fully justified all that their enthusiastic admirers had claimed

But no one thought of predicting that these writers of sentimental stories, the creators of such supurb coxcombs as Pelham and Vivian Grey, and of such specious philosophers as Devereux and Coningsby were destined to become great statesmen and joint members of a conservative ministry. Pelham might have been expected to find a seat in Parliament, but no one could have predicted that the author of Paul Clifford would one day be the head of the Colonia! Department, the administrator and ruler of the affairs of fifty colonies, while at the same time his colleague, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, would be the brilliant author of the Young Duke and Henrietta Temple. There had been no precedent for such promotions and transformations as these in the history of England. Addison had been a Secretary of State it is true, and Sheridan had filled, for a brief time, the unimportant post of a junior Lord of the Treasury; but never before had statesmen been made out of such light fantastic materials as literary dandies. The two brilliant novelists who commenced their career together thirty years ago are now the two foremost men of England; and yet they have been sneered at for their flippancy, ridiculed for their dandyism, and have had to fight their way through the malignant opposition of dull bigotry and conservative prejudices. Bulwer, in fact, had published the greater number of the works on which his reputation as an author is based before one of the Quarterly Reviews deigned to notice him. He was regarded as too light material for the ponderous wisdom of a quarterly reviewer to work upon. But he has had ample revenge of his contemner; and now, while his last novel is going through the press, he leaves the puppets of his imagination to direct the affairs of an Empire. The change must be a violent one. It seems hardly possible for Pisistratus Cax.

ton to lay down his pen when he completes his romance of What Will He Do With It? to enter upon the grave business of managing the affairs ol an empire? to suddenly dimiss the unreal creations which occupied his imagination and absorbed his attention, and immediately begin to receive deputations from Australia, to send orders to the Governor-General of Canada, to appoint Judges and bishops in Jamacia, and listen to complaints from Hong Kong and Van-

It had been reported that, in the event of Sir Bulwer Lytton's taking office under Lord Derby, he would be promoted to the peerage, as there was doubt of his being returned to Parliament if he were to appeal to his constituents for re-election; but whether that was done or not, we had no advices by the last arrival from England. We only know that Lord Stanley had gone into the Board of Control, and that Bulwer Lytton had succeeded him in the Colonial Department. If Bulwer had been a poor man, compelled to work for his daily bread, wholly dependent on himself, and without any family relations to render him assistance, he could not have labored more zealously or devoted more time to his literary pursuits. His systematic habits of study, his patient industry and indomitable perseverance, his prudence, and close attention to details in the composition of his works, his disregard of the slanders of his enemies and the adverse criticisms of the self appointed Rhadamanthuses of the literary world, his determination to do the best he could, and not be put down, make him, in these respects, a bright example for even republican young men to emulate, dandy and aristocrat as he is. Bulwer and Disraeli are both entitled to the gratitude and thanks of literary laborers for giving such satisfactory evidence that a brilliant writer of fictions may be perfectly competent to manage the gravest affairs of State, and that the posession of a lively imagination does not necessarly unfit a man for the details of business or the responsibilities of the most important offices. - N. HON. BEDFORD BROWN -The Richmond Examiner has an article on North-Carolina politics, from which we extract the following complimentary notice of the Hon. Bedford Brown, of Caswell county:

"North Carolina elects her Legislature as well as her Governor on the first Thursday in Angust; and we observe, with pleasure, that she is likely to have some of her oldest and most experienced statesmen in her State councils next winter. Of that class, we may mention Col. Bedford Brown, well and favorably known to the reader as an actor on the National stage of politics for some time. Col. Brown, as we understood the other day, has consented to occupy the position of condidate for the State Senate for Caswell county. He will be elected, we understand, without opposition. The people of Caswell will surely act wisely in calling him again to represent them in the councils of the Old North State .-We mean no flattery to Col. B. when we say that the members of the North Carolina Legislature, especially the younger members, will be fortunate in having for an associate in council, one who has had so many years' experience in legislation; one who was, from early manhood to middle life, in the public service associated with the first men of his own State, and with the greatest national celebrities of our times; and who, in his subsequent retirement, has been an attentive and philosophic observer of public events. There are but few men in any State from whom the young politician can derive so much information and instruction in regard to the political nistory of the last forty years; and especially in relation to the men who have figured at Washington, and the events with which they have been identified. Col. Brown can narrate the stirring events at Washington from 1829 to 1840-of which he might say quorum pars fui-minutely and graphically, as he is sure to do with fidelity. Mr. March, in his popular book, entitled "Webster and his Contemporaries," published in 1850, placed Col. Brown among the able debaters in the U. S. Senate in the discussion upon the celebrated Force Bill, in the days of Nullification. He speaks particplarly of the speeches of Webster, Forsyth, Wilkins, Dallas, Freelinghuysen, Holmes, Clayton, Grundy and Rives, in the affirmative, and of those of Calhoun, Bibb, Brown, Mangum, Tyler, Poindexter and Miller, in the negative. Mr. March paid Col. Brown the compliment of extracting the following passage from his speech;

"I repudiate," said Col. Brown, "the doctrine of Nullification. I repudiate, also, the high-toned doctrine of the Federal party. It is to that high-toned doctrine that we are to attribute Nullification. It is by an improper pressure of the Federal government on the rights of the States, and by its exercise of doubtful powers, that South-Carolina has felt called on to take the defiant position she has assumed; which, if not justifiable is at least susceptible of great palliation. "Proud as I am," said Mr. Brown, in conclusion, "of the achievements which have been performed under the star-spangled banner; proud as I am of the stars and stripes which have fluttered in every preeze and in every clime; anxious as I am for the lory of the country, yet God forbid that those stars nd stripes which have heretofore been the rallying oints of heroism, should float over the mangled orpses of our own countrymen. God forbid that ir country should undergo this sad and disastrous evolution; for whenever that shall take place, not only the liberties of this country, but the best and rightest hopes of the civilized world will be des troyed forever."

Louisburg, June 17, 1858. Louisburg, yes, old Louisburg-the place that has eretofore been sneered at, and called the "swayacked town," is to-day one of the handsomest and ost pleasant villages in North Carolina. For the ist two years it has been rapidly increasing. There not at the present time an old store in the place. n lieu of the old stores that were here a year or vo since, are now erected large and beautiful new difices. Three or four of the prettiest stores in sorth-Carolina are situated here.

The improvements here are not confined to stores nly; but the hammer has been and is still ringing every part of the town. To give your readers an lea of the spirit of enterprise in our midst, we menon the names of some of those who have crected rge and commodious residences recently: J. J. lavis, Esq., Dr. E. Malone, Dr W. R. King, D. C. tone, Esq., Dr. W. W. Green, Dr. W. G. Thomas, ones Fulier, Esq., John Skinner, Esq., T. A. Ca-lle, Mrs. Williams and others. Special and Particular Notice. THE SUBSCRIBER RESPECTFULLY IN-FORMS HIS OLD FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS, that it is his desire to close his entire business. He would call the attention of the public to this well known estab-lishment, which has been the only house that has been in operation for the last 18 years, without a change in the bu-siness; therefore he is compelled to adopt this method of closing up his entire business; and for inducement to the purchaser, he will sell at cost all the goods that remain on hand.

His stock consists of Cloths, Cassimeres, Vestings, and a select assortment of Fancy Goods, of the best materials; a beautiful lot of fancy silk and satin Vestings, for parties, and also a large lot of fancy Cashmeres and Cut Velvet, fancy and plain Marseilles and embroidered Satin Vestings, which will be made up in the most approved style, or they will be disposed of at the counter. He would also state that he has on hand a general assortment of Goods, consisting of Dress Shirts and Linen Collars, Silk and Cotton Undershirts, a splendid assortment of fancy Silk an I Satin Cravats, and black and fancy Stocks of every color and quality, for the Summer wear; plain and fancy Silk Suspenders, black and white Kid Gloves, black and white Silk and Lisle Thread Gloves; white Linen and fancy Silk Handkerchiefs, and various other articles not herein mentioned; and in a word, everything usually kept in similar

The attention of the public is particularly called to this stock of Goods. Great bargains will be given to purchasers. The subscriber would also say if the Goods are not sold out before August Court, he will dispose of the re-maining at public sale, as he is determined to close the entire business by the first of September.

He would say to his numerous friends and customers, that the business in all of the different branches will be conducted as heretofore, and by strict personal attention to the different departments, he hopes to give entire satisfaction to a generous public. Call at the well known house, No. 15, Fayetteville St., for good bargains. The business will be conducted on the cash principle, until further no-tice is given, or if required, terms made known at the The subscriber particularly invites the attention of those that are indebted to this house, either by note or account, or otherwise, to call and male an immediate settlement, as there will be no longer indulgence given; and if not attended to immediately, they will find these claims in the hands of an officer. And he would call the attention of those that reside out of the State to this notice, and also the young gentlemen having left the University of North-Carolina, and ask that they will please forward the amounts justly due this house, (which has been long standing) or their accounts will be put in the hands of a collector, as above stated.

The subscriber would add a word in regard to this positive call on those that are indebted to him: Owing to the long indulgence to his customers, he has sustained heavy damages and is now compelled to make this demand, to enable him to meet his liabilities. He hopes this will be sufficient, as there will be no further notice given, and the above statement will be positively carried out.

LYNN ADAMS,

South-Side Market Square Raleigh, N. C. P. S. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for Goods. Feb. 19, 1858.

NOTICE.—I TAKE THIS METHOD OF INFORM-ING the Citizens of Raleigh and the surrounding country, that I have commenced the GROCERY BUSI-NESS in Raleigh, two squares south-west of the Capitol, and opposite the Masonic Lodge. I expect to keep constantiy on hand a good assortment of Groceries, such as Sugar, Coffee, Teas, Canales, Tobacco, Snuff, Leather, Shoes, Meal, Flour, Lard, Bacon, Butter, Cheese, Molasses, Salt, and a small assortment of Dry Goods, and various other articles too tedious to mention. I hope by strict attention to the business to share a liberal patronage from my friends and acquaintances. JOHN MYATT.

Also, I still continue to carry on the CARRIAGE BUSINESS on the same Lot, not more than seventy-five yards from my Grocery. I have a lot of CARRIAGES and BUGGIES on hand, all of which are of good material, and well put up. And when you are going around looking for Carriages in Raleigh, don't forget me because I am a little out of the way. JOHN MYATT. December 15th, 1857.
